The efforts of Gomez and his wife Morticia to find just the right picture of Gomez for Strife's cover involve them, however, in some hair-raising adventures—such as a magnesium powder explosion and a wild driving test by Gomez, who has never learned about cars.

On Cemetery Ridge, at the edge of town, stands a mysterious old mansion surrounded by a thick hedge and a fence with razor-sharp spikes. A sign at the gate warns, "Beware the Thing." From the house come occasional weird noises—the boom of a foghorn and the reverberation of a gong that rattles all the windows in the neighborhood.

Gomez Addams, head of the spooky family that inhabits the house, is an expert on barracuda breeding and wrecking railroad trains. So who is better qualified to be Strife Magazine's Man of the Year?
